

THE CIVIL WAR: ANGUISH OF EMANCIPATION

This dramatic re-enactment, which centers on the issuance of the Emancipation Proclamation, reveals the agonizing dilemmas that confronted Abraham Lincoln as he struggled to resolve the Civil War. "With all dialogue taken verbatim from manuscripts, letters, diaries, and journals of the period, this excellent film offers a realistic and richly detailed picture." — Landers.

THE CIVIL WAR: PROMISE OF RECONSTRUCTION

What the future would hold for slaves after the Civil War was presaged by the Port Royal "experiment" re-created in this program. Gideonite missionaries set out to educate 7,000 slaves abandoned by plantation owners in South Carolina, and to teach them small business management. Tragically, the noble experiment was lost in a sea of profiteering.

THE BACKGROUND OF THE CIVIL WAR

The beginnings of the American Civil War lie buried in the differences between the North and the South. By compromise and argument, the agricultural South and the industrial North each tried to control the federal government for its benefit. But wide differences between the two sides' economies, lifestyles and attitudes toward slavery created increasingly irreconcilable differences, culminating in the shelling of Fort Sumter and, with it, the start of the Civil War. Produced by Paul Burnford.

BOYHOOD OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN 2ND EDITION

Beginning life in a log cabin in Kentucky, Abraham Lincoln has no idea he will end up in the White House. At 9, he takes a dangerous journey up the Ohio River to settle in Indiana with his family. Lincoln, encouraged to educate himself, does so by reading. As a ferryman, an experience with a lawsuit gets him interested in the law. A trip down the Mississippi River to New Orleans brings him into contact with a slave auction and helps shape his feelings against slavery. Abe Lincoln, feeling homely, awkward and unsure of his future, is a modest but ambitious youth, well-liked for his good-humored company but with no idea of how far his ambition will take him. Part of the Boyhood Series, which chronicles the childhoods of some of America's most fascinating citizens.

THE LINCOLN DOUGLAS DEBATES: THE HOUSE DIVIDES

Newspaper reports of the events leading up to and following the Lincoln-Douglas debates bring life to the underlying issues of the times - and the strong emotional current that precipitated Abraham Lincoln's election to the Presidency just two years later. Although the question of slave or free states is at the forefront of the debates, the real issue of the day is easily evident: Who will decide any issue, the Federal government or the individual state?

GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

A dramatic presentation of the writing and delivery of this singular document shows the historical and political background for Abraham Lincoln's impassioned 1863 speech. Using flashbacks showing the pain, suffering, and horror of the Civil War, this program points out that while Lincoln was not the main speaker, and though his speech received little attention at the time, to later generations it came to represent the bitter struggle and personal loss of life during this wrenching period of our nation's growth. Students will develop an empathy for what it was like to be a part of the conflict that tore a nation asunder.
